

User comes to explore the brand

User Journey 1 starts here

Story Home Page

- Illustrated brand story journey (parallax plus bee animation) - with option to skip for repeat users
- Presentation of currently featured collection - with CTA to explore the collection

User comes to buy from ad/
social media

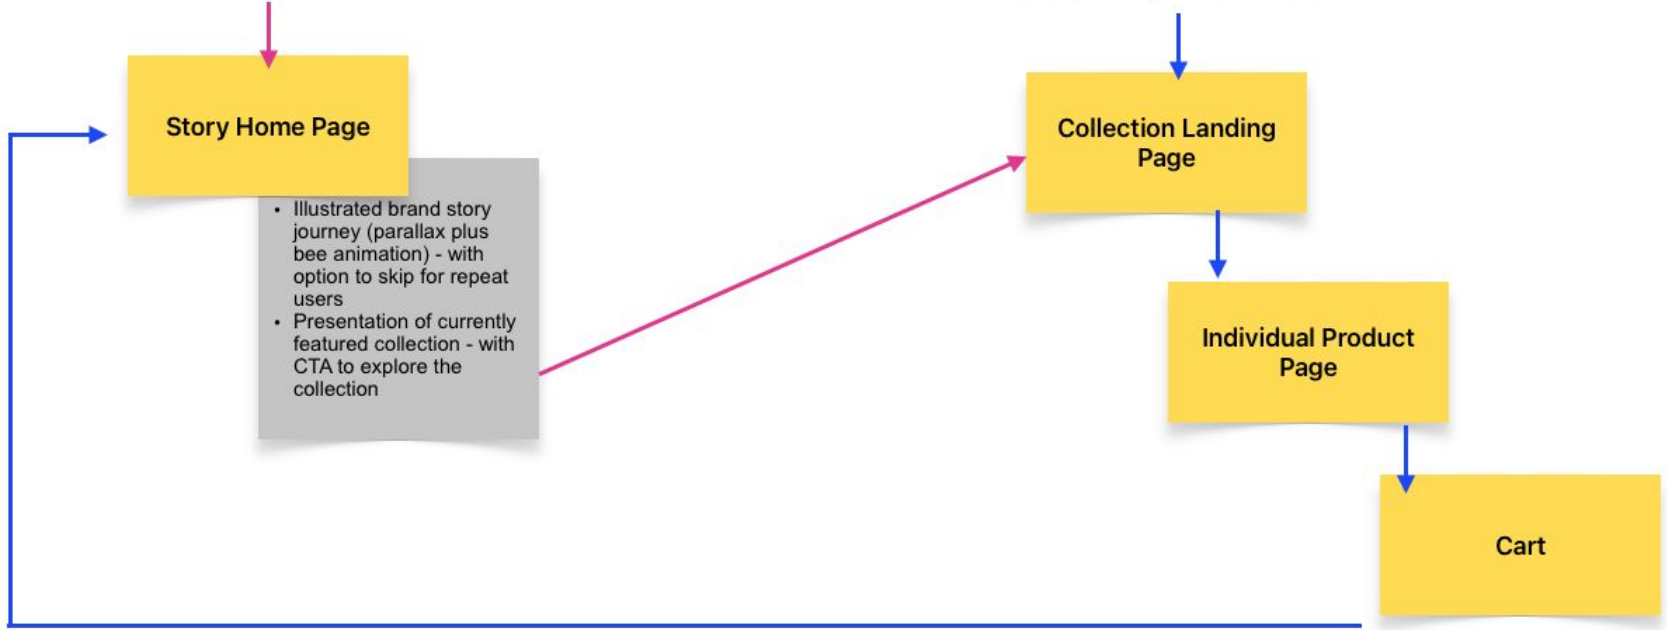

User Journey 12 starts here

Collection Landing Page

Individual Product Page

Cart

After purchase, direct back to story home page

Architecture

The website will have two main pages

- Story home page
- Collection landing page

Story Home Page

- Illustrated brand story journey (parallax plus bee animation) - with option to skip for repeat users
- Presentation of currently featured collection - reference - <https://pin.it/5dYYQZZWQ>
- Image+text and link to non-featured collections (this option is for the future when we have more collections)

Collection landing page

- Presentation of collection - reference - <https://pin.it/5dYYQZZWQ> (repeat the same thing from the Story Home page because this is for users who come to the website from ads/purchase links.
 - Each product links out to an individual product page
 - The individual product page has Photos, video, descriptive text e-commerce standard options + add to cart/buy now etc
- Editorial-style images and text explaining the story behind the collection

Website Design Notes:

- The website is to have a storytelling-based layout everywhere - don't want it to look like a corporate website
- Product home page and individual pages - bunch these by collection. Every time there is a new collection, it will have a separate set of landing pages and individual product pages. At no point are we going to show all the different collections on one common page because each collection has its own language, aesthetic and world.

Other Pages

- About Us Page - Story-led editorial style page.
- Journal Page (blog style functionality - where we can upload media in different formats+long form writeups
- User Account
 - Login / Sign Up
 - Order History
 - Wishlist (if enabled)
- Support (footer?)
 - Shipping & Returns
 - FAQ
 - Privacy Policy
- Contact (also footer?)
 - Contact Form
 - Email / Social Links
 - Collaboration / Press enquiries

Architecture

Other Pages

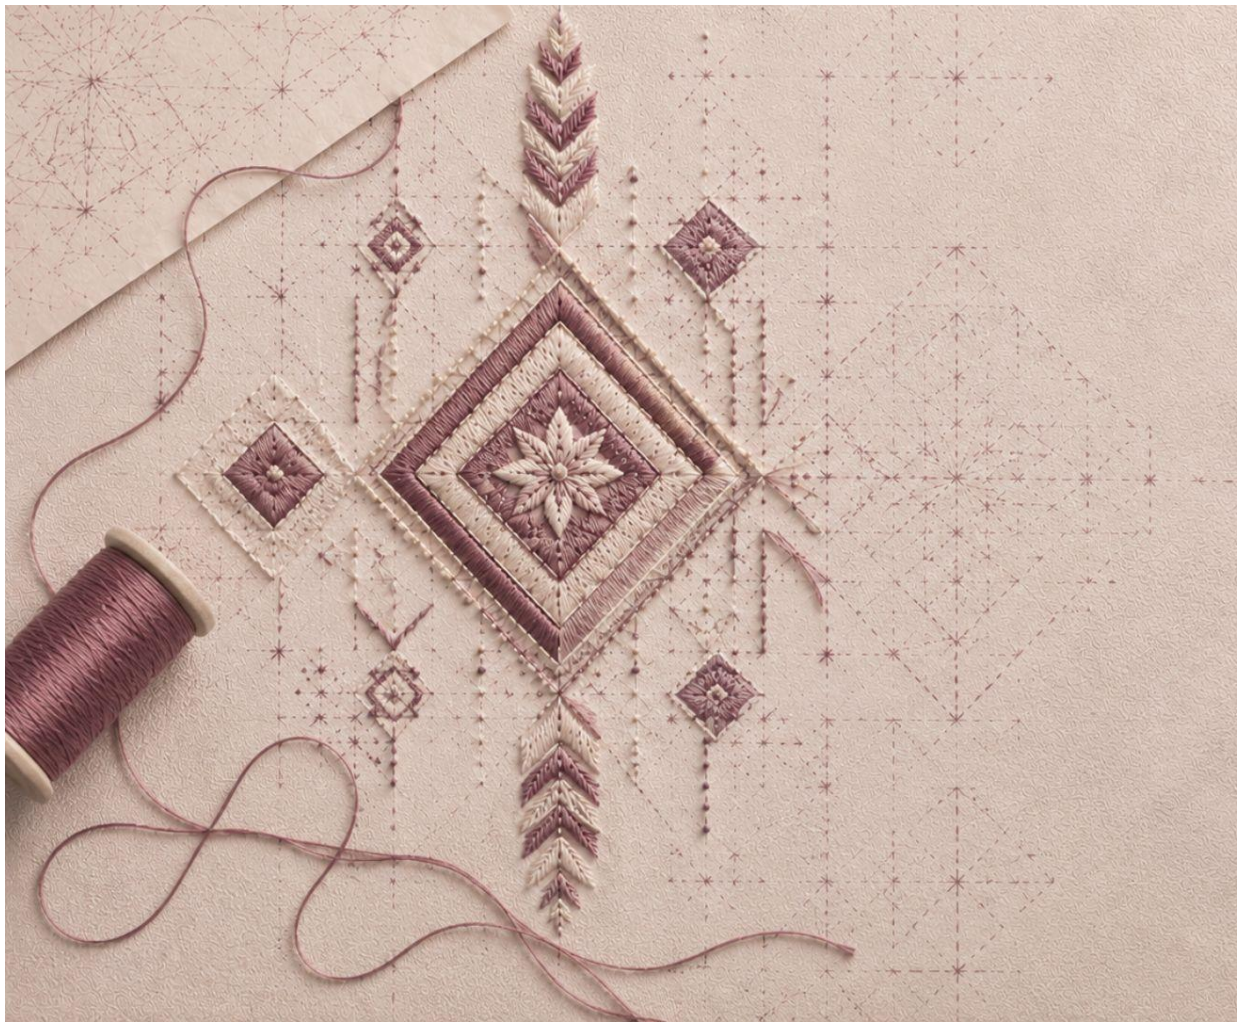

- About Us Page - Story-led editorial style page.
- Journal Page (blog style functionality - where we can upload media in different formats+long form writeups)
- User Account
 - Login / Sign Up
 - Order History
 - Wishlist (if enabled)
- Support (footer?)
 - Shipping & Returns
 - FAQ
 - Privacy Policy
- Contact (also footer?)
 - Contact Form
 - Email / Social Links
 - Collaboration / Press enquiries

Website Design Notes:

- The website is to have a storytelling-based layout everywhere - don't want it to look like a corporate website
- Product home page and individual pages - bunch these by collection. Every time there is a new collection, it will have a separate set of landing pages and individual product pages. At no point are we going to show all the different collections on one common page because each collection has its own language, aesthetic and world.

Home page story flow

The bee does not dream of
honey.

The bee does not dream of
honey.

Honey is what it makes, the thing it leaves behind.

The bee dreams of the flower.
The source. The thing of impossible beauty it moves toward, cannot stop returning to.

That flower is where we begin.

The language of craft, the legacy of artisans, the knowledge learned and carried across generations.
What we make becomes our
honey.

A collection of garments shaped with that same sense of precision and wonder. Gold light caught in thread. Colours that belong to a world of dreams. Pattern so intricate it echoes the legacy of artisans, learned and carried across generations.

This is where you come in. Each piece becomes part of that journey, a way of wearing what you are moving toward, without forgetting where you come from.

I Dream of Zari lives in the stories that the soul returns to again and again. In our designs, you'll find something of yourself, drawn from the past, shaped through craft, and carried into the present.

